

Dear Valued Supplier,

Tate & Lyle announced an agreement in July to separate our food & beverage solutions business and primary products business into two stronger companies. Our food and beverage solutions will remain under the Tate & Lyle brand and primary products will become the new company Primient.

This change only applies to North America and Latin America. Our businesses in the rest of the world are not separating.

The separation will allow both companies to focus on growth

- This is a transformational move that, when completed, will help Primient and Tate & Lyle pursue new growth opportunities in their respective markets. Tate & Lyle will be able to focus on faster growing speciality markets and the global consumer demand for healthier food and drink. While Newco will focus on providing plant-based products for food and industrial markets.

No action is required on your part because your contract is not with our North America or Latin America businesses that are changing

Suppliers contracted with our North America or Latin America businesses will need to update account information on or about February 1, 2022 for the anticipated separation.

We are sending this letter so you are aware of the separation, and to let you know that because your contract is not with a location of ours in North America or Latin America , you do not need to do anything.

Sincerely,

The Tate & Lyle Procurement Team